Acrylic on canvas, 2012, 60 × 100

Shlomi Asher was born in Tirat Carmel, Israel, and has spent his life involved in many types of art. He has danced professionally for the Inbal Dance troupe as well as with a Flamenco troupe. In addition, he worked with stained glass, focusing on glass that he could collect on the beach.

He started painting in 2007 and studied at the Avni Institute of Art and Design. His works have been exhibited since 2015 in galleries around the world and are part of private collections.

Shlomi paints the city of Tel Aviv, where he lives. His paintings express the unique way of life in the city, the houses, the Israeli light, and the people living there. The paintings emphasize a simple and warm taste of the past. In recent years, he began working as an art therapist at a facility for people with mental health issues. To enhance his repertoire of therapy skills, he studied Qigong at the Wingate Institute and began teaching healing through movement according to Chinese medicine.
